Madison OKs more Crystal Beach upgrades

Lease signed for Sports Courts at former country club

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

The City of Madison Board of Public Works approved renovations to Crystal Beach pool and finalized a lease for the sports courts park on the site of the former Madison Country Club during its meeting on Monday morning.

The renovations at Crystal Beach include an expansion to the work already proposed for the 80-year-old property.

Initially, the city had entered into an agreement with CWC Latitudes LLC. for work to improve the pool house by updating the facility with new restrooms and shower rooms, an elevator for American with Disabilities Act access to the second floor and a renovation of the second floor to convert it into more usable space.

Monday's order added a new pool deck and a much-needed pool liner, increasing the total cost of the project to $133,980. The Board approved the agreement unanimously.

"This agreement will extend the useful life of Crystal Beach, one of the landmark assets of our community," Madison Mayor Bob Courtney said.

In addition, the city finalized an agreement with Indiana-Kentucky Electric Corporation for use of the sports courts on the site of the former Madison Country Club. The deal is just for the courts themselves and allows for parking on the site by participant.

Last month, Madison City Council approved $30,000 to renovate the courts. The deal with IKEC is for five years with an option for an additional five years and gives the city the right of first refusal if IKEC decides to ever sell the property.

Formerly the site of two tennis courts, the area has been refurbished for multi-use with accommodations for two tennis courts that can also be used as six Pickleball courts with two shuffleboard courts on the end. A bocce ball court will be placed nearby.

In other business the board:

• Approved a motion to install a 10-minute loading zone in front of 113 E. Main St. as well as handicap parking spots at 910 W. Main St. and 709 Walnut St..

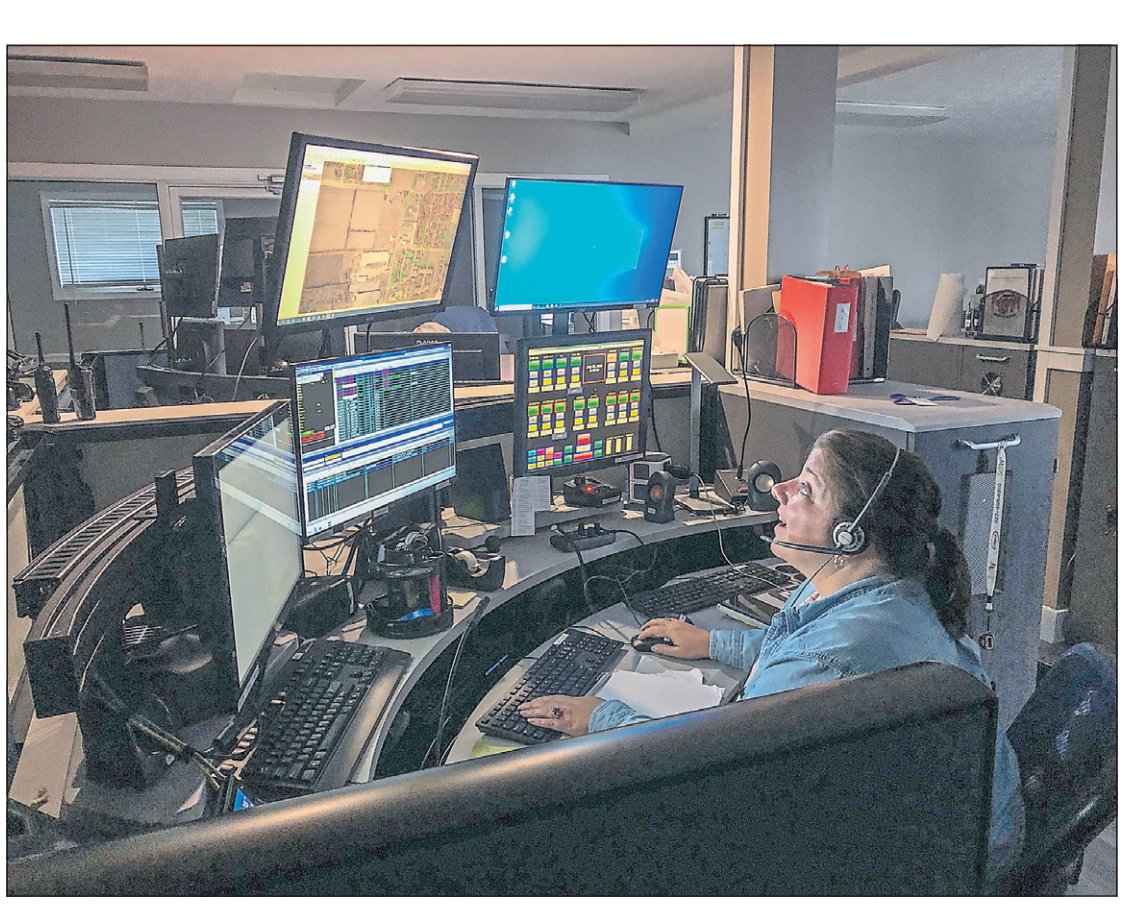
• Approved the closing of Vaughn Drive between West Street and Central Avenue on Oct. 8-9 from 4 p.m. to 11 p.m. for a River Valley Community Church camp meeting.

• Approved a PACE extension of 60 days to the owners at 712 W. Second St. and approved PACE loans totaling $14,635.81 to three locations, 124 E. Main St. ($7,500), 213 Jefferson St. ($3,760.63), and 505 West Main St. ($3,375.18).

• Approved a five-year agreement with Active Network for a new software program for the Parks & Recreation Department. The software will allow the department to do all scheduling online and allow for communication to those signed up with Parks programs. There is an $11,000 activation fee with a yearly cost of $4,900. Parks Director Seth Pennington is hopeful to have the system online by December.

• Set the next meeting for 11:30 a.m. on Monday, Aug. 17.

911, EMA settling into a much-needed new home



Photos by Collin Overton

Dispatcher Julie Flowers sits at her console in the new 911 dispatch center at the Jefferson County communications center. Flowers now has plenty of room to work with distance from other dispatchers, improving her ability to hear callers and first responders and vice versa.

With a wall lined by TVs and monitors from surveillance cameras and computers and desks with phones and other communications equipment, the new Jefferson County Emergency Operations Center is ready to respond immediately to any local emergency.

BY COLLIN OVERTON

Jefferson County 911 and Emergency Management have spent the past year responding to their own emergency: creating enough office space to do their jobs to the fullest of their abilities.

Dispatch spent the month of July settling into its new home at the Jefferson County Public Safety Center on Green Road — a three-part office for 911, the Emergency Management Agency (EMA) and space to house certain courthouse records — and planned to be fully operational in the new center June 23, but software glitches in the new computer-aided dispatch (CAD) system caused delays while the department worked to make things right.

Now the agency is up and running with a new home, equipment and software, and the location is already making a difference in efficiency and morale, 911 Executive Director Susie Lawrence said.

"The sound alone is unreal. We can hear things better, the officers can hear us better, and it's away from the downtown Main Street — the traffic, the horns, the brakes," she said.

Both 911 and EMA were in need of new offices, with 911 crammed into a former bedroom on the third floor of the Jefferson County Jail and EMA operating out of a small office in the Jefferson County Health Department. The county started looking for an existing building to house both agencies last spring on a tight budget, since grants and funding opportunities for such projects were limited at the time, EMA Director Troy Morgan said.

After buying the 7,000-square-foot former WorkOne unemployment office in June and starting renovations in July, the county began converting the structure into the three-part public safety complex now seen today. The total cost of renovation to the county was about $230,000, Morgan said.

Lawrence and Morgan put their heads together in designing the Safety Center, going through local contractor Bumper Johnson to create a multi-faceted space with two wings for both agencies

Court rejects Keller sentencing appeal

He gets 4 consecutive 16-year sentences

BY MARK CAMPBELL

A Madison man who pleaded guilty and received a maximum sentence by Jefferson Circuit Judge D.J. Mote for the aggravated battery of an 18-month-old toddler who had been left in his care has lost his appeal for a sentence reduction.

Christopher Ray Keller

Christopher Ray Keller, 37, had pleaded guilty to four counts of Level 3 felony aggravated battery in connection with the beating, choking, dropping and falling on his stepson at multiple times over a 10-hour period on June 7, 2019, while the boy's mother was at work.

The child, who was later taken to the King's Daughters' Hospital Emergency Room for treatment and transferred to Louisville, was "covered head to toe with bruises," and suffered four compression fractures to his spine, bite marks, a liver injury and numerous other trauma, in an attack that was recorded on a video surveillance camera that was admitted as evidence during his sentencing hearing.

In addition, Keller encouraged his own young daughter to participate in the attack and later tried to say the boy's injuries were a result of that "horse play" and that his daughter had "kicked his butt." He also later threatened the boy's mother, his wife at the time, that he would "make her life miserable" if she pursued the case with police and "encouraged" her to kill herself.

Mote accepted Keller's guilty plea under an agreement the defense negotiated with the Jefferson County Prosecutor's Office. After listening and reviewing aggravating and mitigating evidence in the case, Mote followed the prosecution's recommendation and sentenced Keller to serve four maximum 16-year terms in the Indiana Department of Corrections and further ordered that the sentences should run consecutively for a total of 64 years in prison.

Citing Keller's premeditation of his crimes, his lack of remorse toward the victim's mother and the heinous nature of how he battered the boy and involved the other child in the assault as aggravating factors, Mote agreed in his closing comments and gave Keller the maximum sentence.

"It shows that he is not only a risk to the children in these videos, but any other person in the community," Mote said, later adding, "I won't go so far as to say that Mr. Keller's children are better off . . . and the hardship will be significant, but I cannot conclude that it's undue. The Court gives very little weight to remorse."

Public comment sought on bridge project

The public comment period on Madison Railroad's proposed replacement of the historic Graham Creek Bridge is now open through Aug. 18.

The project will remove the existing 140-year-old Graham Creek Bridge, which connects Jefferson and Jennings counties by rail, and replace it with a new 260-foot long span consisting of four 65-foot steel plate deck girder spans.

The steel structure of the existing bridge, a Pratt deck truss, will be cut up and removed from the site along with the current concrete and timber abutments. The project, approved for funding in 2019, will take place within the railroad right-of-way and require new ground disturbance within the right-of-way in order to construct temporary access roads and construction platforms. After construction of the new bridge, the access roads, platforms and debris will be removed from the site and the vegetation restored.

Sponsored by Madison Railroad, the structure is being constructed partially with public funds, including a $4.2 million Consolidated Rail Infrastructure and Safety Improvements Grant from the U.S. Department of Transportation, being administered by the Federal Railroad Administration. Partial funding from the State of lndiana and local entities will also be involved.

Because the project will adversely impact a historic property, local residents can review and comment on the draft Memorandum of Agreement. The document can be viewed at www.madisonrailroad.com and www.regulations.gov/docket?D=-FRA-2020-005 l. Comments can be shared directly with the Federal Railroad Administration by visiting the regulations.gov link or by searching regulations.gov for Docket Number FRA-2020-0051.

3 arrested in numerous thefts

Kentucky State Police last week made three arrests in an ongoing investigation involving numerous thefts from at least a two county area.

Post 5 Troopers had received an increased number of theft reports in Henry and Oldham counties — often involving thefts of guns and vehicle — beginning around Tuesday, July 21.

A break in the case came shortly after 6 a.m. on Sunday, July 26, when Troopers were notified of suspicious vehicles located on Walker Lane in Henry County. The unoccupied vehicles were not listed as stolen at that time, but a short time later one of the vehicles, a 2019 GMC Sierra pickup, was reported stolen by it's owner.

Troopers returned to the area to attempt to locate the vehicle and discovered it was no longer parked at it's earlier location. While speaking with nearby residents, Troopers noticed the same truck returning to the scene, and attempted to stop the vehicle. Four occupants in the truck then fled on foot into a nearby wooded area, three of whom were caught and arrested.

Kyle Watson, 19, of La Grange, Kentucky, was arrested and charged with theft of a vehicle, theft of a firearm, criminal possession of a forged instrument (first and second degree), criminal mischief and criminal trespassing. He was lodged in the Oldham County Detention Center. The other two individuals arrested were juveniles and both were lodged in a juvenile detention center.

During the ensuing investigation, several stolen items were recovered from the vehicle and from the individuals arrested including including the 2019 GMC Sierra, a 2012 Ford Expedition, a pistol and several gun holsters. Drugs were also seized from the individuals as well as a large sum of cash.

Troopers believe the individuals are connected to many of the recent break-ins and thefts in the areas of Smithfield, Pendleton, Sulphur, La Grange and other areas in west-Henry and Oldham counties.

The investigation is ongoing and anyone with information is asked to call Post 5 at 502-532-6363. The investigating Troopers are also asking victims of recent thefts or break-ins in the specified areas reach out to the post if they have not already done so.

APPEAL

Keller had also argued that he "was caring for his daughter and two boys while under the influence of methamphetamine, Subutex and heroin" but Mote noted that even if the Court credited that as a mitigating circumstance, it was not sufficient for an earlier release because those addictions actually make Keller less suitable for release to raise his children.

The three judge Court of Appeals panel rejected Keller's argument that Mote's sentencing order was "an abuse of discretion" and that the judge "did not adequately explain why consecutive sentences were warranted."

The Court's ruling was written by Judge Robert R. Altice Jr. with Judge L. Mark Bailey and Judge Terry A. Crone concurring.

Keller also argued at the appeal that his character did not warrant such a substantial sentence and that his prison term is just one year less than the maximum sentence for a murder.

"Regarding Keller's character, we note that he has a criminal history that includes convictions for battery and strangulation. Keller also admitted to using four different drugs while he was charged with the care of his two-year old daughter and his fiancé's two young children. As he abused Child, he encouraged his two-year-old daughter to participate. After being confronted with the injuries to Child, Keller encouraged Mother (his wife at the time) to kill herself and threatened to make her life miserable. We find no compelling evidence in the record that casts Keller's character in a positive light ...

"... Although Keller did not inflict fatal injuries on Child, the impact of Keller's abuse will be lifelong. The nature of the offense is brutal, and Keller showed no restraint or regard for Child. In short, we do not find Keller's sentence to be inappropriate in light of his character and the nature of the offense."

He spent his high school years in Corbin, Kentucky, graduating from Corbin High School. During his teen years, he was a member of the national Aviation Cadet Program, stimulating a lifelong interest in aviation.

He attended the University of Kentucky where he was a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon and Pershing Rifles. He left college early to join the U.S Airforce during the Korean War, training as an Air Traffic Controller. He was stationed in Japan directing air traffic into war zones and training others. He was proud to have mastered some of the Japanese language while there and taught his children and students some sayings. Following his enlistment, he returned to Louisville, Kentucky where he met his future wife Sue; they were married February 27, 1960 in Madison, Indiana.

He graduated from Murray State University with BA degree in Social Studies and Political Science. He organized the MSU Aquatics Club, establishing a community program to teach swimming to mentally challenged children. He loved telling how the children progressed from fear of the water to joyful play. His first teaching position was in North Vernon. He was certified as a Red Cross Water Safety Instructor and Small Craft Instructor and taught swimming classes and water safety over the years.

His first teaching position was with 5th and 6th graders in North Vernon Indiana, where he invented games to teach history and used the Sears catalog to teach modern math. He was also Assistant Tennis Coach. He earned a MS in Counseling and EdS in School Administration at Indiana University. He was a popular teacher with the students in the Indianapolis Indiana school system until his retirement, teaching high school and adult evening school, and establishing/coaching the chess club. (He was once crowned "Faculty King" at the half time of a home basketball game, much to his embarrassment.) During his years in Indiana, his professional activities included serving as President of the Indianapolis Teachers Association of the IEA, and as a site accreditation visitor to secondary schools in several states for the North Central Association. He was active in politics in Indiana as a candidate for State Representative and was a Precinct Committee for the Republican Party (in later years, he was a proud Independent).

Following retirement from teaching, he moved to Charlotte North Carolina where he has resided since 1993, and where he was an ERA Charlotte Realtor. He loved his family and was a proud father of his children. He had a big laugh, was a great storyteller, and enjoyed people. He was often late to events, having stopped to talk to someone he knew or someone he just met. In this he was just like his father; Randy remembered as a young boy sitting on the back of the horse with his father, for what seemed like hours, while his talked with a neighbor.

He is survived by his wife Dr. Ina Sue M Marquis Bishop; his children Jon Marquis Bishop and Heather Suzanne Bishop; brother Rex Bishop and wife Kay of Bedford KY and sister Dr. Yvonne Bishop Shoemaker of La Grange KY; sister-in-law Nancy Marquis Vaughn of Atlanta Ga: brothers-in-law Harold Edwin Marquis III and wife Susan of Destin FL, and Dr. Milton Harrison Marquis and wife Anne of Tallahassee, FL; many beloved cousins, nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his beloved parents Nora and Roy Bishop of Kentucky, and brother-in-law Donald Wayne Vaughn of Atlanta.

The family would like to thank Hospice and Palliative Care of Charlotte for their caring support. The family will have a private graveside service at Sharon Memorial Park and will plan a Memorial Service in the Spring to honor his memory and share joyful stories of his life when the pandemic is behind us and it is safe to gather. Memorial contributions may be given to the Alzheimer's Association, The American Red Cross, Hospice and Palliative Care of Charlotte or Mallard Creek Presbyterian Church. Taylor ready to step in as Trimble AD

Trimble County baseball coach Brent Taylor, left, has been hired by the school to take on the additional duties as athletic director beginning the 2020-21 school year.

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Brent Taylor got a chance to return to the school he loves as baseball coach last year. Now the 2000 Trimble County High School graduate will get a chance to put his stamp on the entire athletic program.

Taylor was hired as the new athletic director at Trimble County High School late last week, replacing Mike Isley who resigned late in the spring. Taylor takes over the job at a unique time for high school sports in the state, but he's ready for the challenge.

"It's going to a difficult time for sure," Taylor said. "It absolutely killed me when we canceled the baseball season. I felt for all of my players, especially the seniors. This is going to be a difficult challenge, but if we do our part, hopefully it will lead to better things."

The COVID-19 pandemic wiped out the spring sports season across the country and the KHSAA has already delayed the start of the fall season three weeks until September. Taylor's first order of business will be to reschedule three weeks of athletic events, including the first three weeks of the football season as well as Trimble's only home cross country event of the year.

It'll be a tough task for any athletic director, let alone one walking into the job for the first time on Aug. 1. But with a strong support system around him, Taylor is confident that he will be able to get the job done.

"We've got a good set of coaches and everybody is on the same page," Taylor said. "We're still practicing under the Phase 3 guidelines and we have good response from all of our coaches. I think everybody is up to the challenge and are excited to get started."

Taylor never imagined that he would be in this position three years ago. After graduating from Trimble, Taylor headed to Jefferson County Technical College and then spent 15 years working in maintenance at North American Stainless. When a new occupational teaching position opened up at the school, Taylor saw it as a chance to go in a different career direction.

When long-time baseball coach Frank Ragland resigned before last season, Taylor — who had played for Ragland — was the logical choice to replace him. The Raiders went 8-12 in Taylor's first year, but a promising season this past year was wiped out.

Now, Taylor sits in another job that Ragland held for nearly two decades: athletic director.

"I know that I can lean on Frank if I have any questions and there are a lot of other really good resources that I can use," Taylor said. "I'm ready to step up into the role and do it on my own. I'm excited to get started."

The first practice date for all sports will now be Aug. 24 with the first cross country, soccer and volleyball games to be played no earlier than Sept. 7. The soccer postseason tournament will begin Oct. 13 while all other sports will keep their original postseason dates.

Football's first game date has been pushed back an additional week to Sept. 11 with the playoffs now starting Nov. 13.

Bernard holds off Shane to score win at Seattle

Miss Madison drivers finish 1-2

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Jeff Bernard finally reversed his bad luck in final heats to pull out his first H1 Drivers Invitational win of the year, driving the U-91 Goodman Real Estate/Miss Madison to victory in the virtual HomeStreet Bank Cup in Seattle on Sunday.

Bernard entered Sunday's race with victories in all six preliminary heats he had competed in but that dominance had not resulted in an overall virtual race victory. That changed on Sunday when race leader Taylor Evans hooked at the end of the first lap and Bernard cruised to the victory.

"Goodman Real Estate really wanted to win Seafair this year and unfortunately we couldn't do that in real life," Bernard said. "I hope they enjoy this virtual win. We put in a lot of work to do it."

Bernard, who was scheduled to drive the Miss Madison Racing Team's second entry this year in real life, was one of the few regular H1 drivers who had experience playing on the HydroSim software before the season started and it showed with dominating performances in the prelims at Madison and Tri-Cities.

Bernard was again dominate in the prelims on Sunday, winning two of the three heats with only a second place in Heat 2B ending his streak.

"If finishing second meant that I had better luck in the final then I'll take it," Bernard said.

Bernard, in lane two, was locked in a tight three-way race with Taylor Evans on his inside and Jimmy Shane on the outside. As the three exited turn two of the first lap, Evans' U-99.9 Bucket List Miss Rock knifed into the water and cartwheeled out of the way.

Bernard then used his inside lane to hold off Shane for his first E-League win.

"On this game, my heart's pounding more than in real life. I tell people that. I don't know if they believe me or not, but it's the absolute truth," Bernard said. "We just really want to do a good job for our sponsors. It's an honor for me to drive for the Miss Madison Racing Team and the whole City of Madison. I really hope that they're really enjoying this."

Shane steered the U-1 Miss HomeStreet to second place giving Miss Madison Racing its second 1-2 finish of the season. The team has also won three of the four Drivers Invitational races with Shane topping Guntersville and Madison. Kelsey Best also picked up a win in the H1 E-League with the Miss HomeStreet.

J. Michael Kelly, last week's winner at the Tri-Cities, steered the U-12 Graham Trucking to third while Evans recovered from his accident to place fourth. Jamie Nilsen was fifth in the U-11 J&Ds, Patrick Haworth was sixth in the U-7 Boitano Homes, and Miss Madison crewmember Trey Holt was seventh in the U-98 Graham Trucking American Dream after hitting a buoy.

The real-life H1 drivers will wrap up their season on Sept. 19 in San Diego. The E-League series will compete in Seattle Aug. 15 and in San Diego on Aug. 29. All races can be viewed on H1's Facebook and YouTube pages.

Working through emotional affair

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I have been with my husband for 23 years now, married for the last eight. A year ago, I found out that my husband had been communicating with an old high school girlfriend without my knowledge. They ran into each other seven years ago and had been talking daily. He used his work phone so I wouldn't be able to suspect anything. She knew he was married, and that we have five kids.

He's accepted responsibility and has said he understands it is a form of cheating. He's apologized and says he has no romantic feelings for this woman. They were just friends. I called her one day to ask if she had feelings for my husband. She said she did not.

A year later, I still don't trust my husband. I feel insecure and think maybe there's something missing from our marriage that this woman provided for him. I just can't get over the betrayal. The people I have spoken with say it's not worth ending our marriage over. But I can't let it go. I've always believed cheating is a deal breaker, and that's exactly what he's done to me. I love my husband very much, but I don't think I can get past his emotional affair. Am I overreacting by considering ending my marriage for this? — Hurt and Confused

Dear Hurt and Confused: It's time to examine your feelings about yourself and your marriage. It is understandable that you are hurt by what your husband did. However, he has apologized for it and stopped his relationship with her for you. Now, it is up to you to forgive. Forgiveness is a gift you give to yourself. It gives strength to move on. Though you can't change the past or go back to the same marriage you once had, you can decide what you'd like your marriage to look like from this point forward. Seek the help of a professional counselor to support you in working through this hurt and anger, and then consider marriage counseling.

Dear Annie: Recently, I read a letter in your column from a single mom who took offense at the term "broken home." My comment isn't about the letter but your reply: "There is nothing broken about a single mom." You should have added "single dad" to your reply. My son is one of many single dads who are raising children with no partner.

His wife died suddenly when their son was 13 months old, and he has had to navigate day care and all the other daily struggles of raising a child while working a minimum-wage job and not having family nearby to help him. He is doing a wonderful job, and I am sure those other single dads out there are as well. I don't think they get the sympathy or credit that moms do, and both of them deserve it.

Raising a child is difficult work, so here's a letter of gratitude to all moms and dads, whether single or partnered. — Including Dads

Dear Including Dads: Thank you for pointing this out. There are many wonderful single dads doing great jobs in raising their children, and you're right; they very often don't get the credit they deserve.

COVID family feud

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My husband and I have been following the recommendations for protecting ourselves and others from COVID-19 in recent months. Although we've missed seeing our kids and our grandchildren, we've stuck to our guns on this, even as others around us have begun to take a more relaxed approach. We've only recently started to see our immediate family (kids and grandkids), per the reopening guidelines in our state.

I am in my 50s and have a health condition that makes me susceptible to respiratory illnesses. If I were to be infected with the virus, I would most likely not survive. My husband is on the borderline of being at an elevated risk due to his age.

My stepson and his wife recently hosted a first birthday party for our youngest grandchild. When they sent out the invitations, they said they understood if people didn't feel comfortable attending. Given that the party would involve a large group of people from different places, most of whom do not believe in wearing masks or taking other precautions, and co-mingling for a few hours in a small space, we elected not to go.

Now my stepson and his wife are angry with us and have gone so far as to post passive-aggressive comments on social media essentially putting down those of us who believe in this "hoax." My stepson is not speaking to my husband over this, and I'm willing to bet he and his wife are placing the blame on me. I feel really bad about the tension this has created, but I don't see what other choice we had in this situation. I am at high risk, and even if my husband went without me, his exposures potentially put me at risk through the close contact we share. Honestly, though, with the numbers going up instead of down, I probably wouldn't have felt comfortable attending even if I weren't considered to be at an elevated risk.

It hurts that they don't care about my health and safety, while I am the one wondering if taking precautions to protect myself and others is selfish. I don't think this is a situation where it's possible to compromise and please everyone involved, nor do I feel like the coronavirus is going away anytime soon. Do you have any suggestions for how to best deal with this? — COVID Caused a Family Rift

Dear COVID Caused a Family Rift: You dealt with this wonderfully. You protected yourself and your husband. I would caution you not to bet or guess that your stepson and his wife are angry with you or blaming you. Communication is key here. Reach out to them via FaceTime, and let them know how sad you are that you were not able to be at your grandchild's birthday.

This is a very frustrating time for many families who cannot celebrate together. The important thing is to acknowledge that, rather than get angry over it.

and a room for Circuit Court records that were being damaged from moisture in the courthouse basement. None of the interior walls were load-bearing, so the county had to tear about 8-10 of them down and add a few to create certain office spaces and meet the needs of both agencies, Morgan said.

The eastern side of the building serves as the storage room for the court records, a few feet down the hall are Lawrence's office and the dispatch room, outfitted with new dispatcher work stations that include an adjustable desk, four monitors for different software systems, customizable lighting and personal heaters and air conditioners.

Further down the hall is a break room and kitchen, lockers for employees and a spare room with a roll-away bed for overnight stays in the event of a snowstorm or any other weather emergency that would make it hard for dispatchers to get home, Lawrence said.

The east wing of the building leads into the lobby area. Guests arriving are met by a receptionist and an iPad, which they can use to request to meet with members of either agency by signing in and sending an email notification to the person they wish to see.

To the west of the lobby are cubicles for the EMA deputy director and logistics chief and another corridor leading to restrooms, Morgan's office, a back patio and a ham radio communications room for emergency events like tornadoes that might damage towers and make it impossible for dispatchers to take calls.

Quarters were cramped at the old 911 dispatch center, located in a former bedroom in the Jefferson County Jail, with the three dispatchers and their desks on top of each other making for difficult communications at times.

emergency operations center (EOC), used by EMA to monitor emergency situations and stay in contact with the state Department of Homeland Security. Also nearby are a conference room and training room for hosting training sessions, meetings and other miscellaneous uses.

For dispatch, the new space is a noticeable upgrade from the last location on the third floor of the Jefferson County Jail, a 10-foot-by-13-foot workspace converted from an old bedroom that was a tight fit for three dispatchers. Each dispatcher worked elbow-to-elbow on four monitors spread across a folding table, so the new location has given dispatchers a needed boost, Lawrence said.

The move from downtown and the Sheriff's Office has also reduced distractions and foot traffic that would otherwise interfere with calls, she added.

"I think it's made it 125% more efficient," Lawrence said.

As a bonus, Lawrence said the building allows 911 to keep its biggest crew of dispatchers on record. Whereas the courthouse allowed for about two to three dispatchers a shift, 911 now employs four dispatchers each day shift and three each night, increasing the capacity to take calls and reducing response time on calls — which all save lives, Lawrence said.

Morgan had already moved EMA into the building in January and said the difference on his end was immediately noticeable.

His original workspace was about half the size of his current office and actually belonged to Jefferson County Health Officer John Hossler, who allowed Morgan to work there. At the old place the equipment needed to set up an Emergency Operation Center remained in cardboard boxes until EMA activated an emergency, in which case Morgan would have to spend two to three house setting up a makeshift station in one of the Health Department's spare rooms.

"Now all I have to do is go in there and flip a switch," he said.

Consisting mostly of computers, TVs and video equipment, the EOC allows county EMA to report back to the state operations center through a web-based program and access video surveillance that can be shared live with the state Department of Homeland Security or the governor. As is the case with all 98 counties, the EOC is required to report any state of emergency to the governor, who then reports to the federal government if emergency assistance is to be allocated.

Having that readily available at a moment's notice has been much-needed, especially after EMA had to activate the center at Level 4 due to the COVID-19 pandemic in March, Morgan said. EMA mostly supported the Health Department through disseminating information through briefings and securing personal protective equipment and testing supplies, but the 24/7 availability made the process a lot easier, he added.

"It's just being prepared and ready to respond at a moment's notice 24 hours a day, and we didn't have that six months ago, eight months ago," Morgan said.

The renovations also made it possible for EMA to set up cubicle space for the deputy director and administrative assistant, who works for both emergency management and 911. EMA now also has a full-time weather station connected to the communications tower outside, which the agency will soon use to send weather information to the National Weather Service for meteorologists and for the public to view. Morgan said EMA is working through technical issues to get that set up, but it would be the only weather station of its kind in the immediate area.

On top of providing work space, the building has also hosted a few County Council and Commission meetings and allows for both agencies to host trainings there rather than travel out-of-town, which has greatly reduced travel costs, Lawrence said.

"We still could have done it without this building, but it makes it so much easier," she said of the overall facility.
